A Discussion with José A. Rico about the White House Initiative on Educational Excellence for Hispanic Americans

Voice your opinion – give your feedback

José Rico is the deputy director of the White House Initiative on Educational Excellence for Hispanic Americans. Named to his post on Feb. 1, 2010, Rico helps carry out President Obama's efforts to improve the academic achievement of Hispanic students. He came to the US Department of Education as a senior adviser in the Office of Elementary and Secondary Education on April 2009.

Rico is a graduate of the Chicago Public Schools. He has served as a science teacher at Latino Youth Alternative High School in Chicago. He also worked at the University of Illinois–Chicago's Small Schools Workshop to help develop small, innovative learning communities in public schools. More recently, after participating in the New Leaders for New Schools program, at National Louis University, Rico became the first principal at the Multicultural Arts High School which opened in 2005. Rico served as the founding principal of the school when he joined USDE last year.
